Economy Probers Reopen Inquiry, Ask List of Savings

LETTER REQUESTS RIVERS TO DETAIL COST REDUCTIONS

Committee, Apparently Assured of Funds for Investigation, Turns to Resources Unit Today.

A special economy investigating committee, its life prolonged until June 1 by a resolution of the house of representatives, resumed its study of state government costs yesterday and moved to inquire what economies previously recommended have been carried out.

The committee, resuming hearings after a recess of three weeks, turned briefly to the State Department of Public Health and Department of Natural Resources R. F. Burch, commissioner of natural resources, was summoned to appear at 9:30 o'clock this morn-

Meanwhile the committee directed that letters be sent to heads of all departments investigated during the regular legislative session, inquiring what recommendations, if any, have been put into effect, and if so, how and when. Message to Rivers.

Also authorized was a similar letter to all department heads asking a summary of changes made as result of budget adjustments notified promptly of future changes. All officials likewise were to be asked to list changes contemplated "to the end of economy and efficiency," To Governor Rivers the commit tee dispatched a request for a list of all economies thus far put in ers tomorrow. effect by executive order, with no-

Operation of the committee until it completes its investigation, or until its June 1 deadline, appeared assured by an announcement of State Treasurer George B. Hamilton that he had found court-approved precedent for paying per diem compensation to the committee members and the costs of clerical help.

Hamilton said a decision of the Georgia supreme court held that the highest tribunal for action upon whether such a body as the committee should be paid was the legislative auditing committee set up by the house of representatives. He referred to a pledge of armed aid to Rumania and negotiations with Jugoslavia, Turkey, Greece and Soviet Russia designed to stretch the "stop Hitler" barrier across the face of Europe.

Such a pool of fighting strength more formidable than anything in history-would contain nearly 20,000,000 soldiers of seven armies, compared with about 10,250,000 troops in Germany, Italy and Hungary.

Chamberlain's announcement that Britain and her potential allies are ready to fight in a showdown on any Nazi effort to 'dominate the world by force" brought every British political leader rallying to the side of the man who for the last year has been condemned on all sides.

Eager Approval Eager approval came from such former foes as David Lloyd Brunette Mary Riley Collapses in a Strip-Tease Whirl in New York Apartment House.

Excitement induced by performing a strip tease jitterburg dance took the life of brunet Mary Riley, 32, formerly of Atlanta, as the climax of a hectic drinking party in a New York apartment early yesterday.

While detectives were questioning two male participants in the party, a medical examiner found that the attractive woman had died of a spontaneous hemorrhage at the base of the brain and not from a deep scalp laceration which the men said had resulted from her falling against a book case.

The party took place, according to dispatches, in the Riverside drive apartment of Hugh Hillard, brother-in-law of an an Atlantan, Buddy Kelly, of an East avenue address, who, with another woman, Barbara Johnson, who hurried away from the accident, completed the foursome an, Barbara Johnson, who hurried away from the accident, completed the foursome.

All had been drinking heavily, according to the men. In the midst of the activities, they said, the Riley woman, inspired by the strains of a "hot" radio number, began her dance. Suddenly she collapsed, they said, falling heavily upon the bookcase.

The men carried the limp form to Kelly's automobile and rushed to Reconstruction hospital. She was clothed only in a black lounging robe and stockings.

Both women had been residing at a Broadway hotel, police declared. The Riley woman, whose home was in Mebane, N. C., had lived in Atlanta at a Luckie street address.

He is more solidly established than Napoleon. He will last longer. However, if Napoleon had had the mechanical equipment that is hold-ing Hitler to his power he might have died in power at a ripe old age instead of having been snapped off at the height of his career.

Hitler Aided by Science.

"Hitler has the mechanical voice and the mechanical ear at his command. Whenever he speaks he is heard. He is in touch with everyone at once. Napoleon was heard only as far as the voice God gave him could carry. Consequently, we are forced to admit that the engi-neers, the scientists, the techni-cians of this modern world are the boys who are keeping Hitler in control. There were times when Napoleon needed a telephone bad-

The nations whose humor rises above all their miseries to smooth the rough path of life are the na-tions with cosmopolitan popula-tions, according to Schwartz.

"Where you find a melting pot, as in America," he says, "you find great clashes of habits and customs and these clashes produce the humor. The more dramatic the life the more investigation is the humor. life the more ingrained is the humor of those who live it. The Irish, the Italians, the Jews, the negroes have all known suffering, and where can you find better humor than has been born in the souls of these four races?"

ATLANTA, GA., APRIL 4, 1939.

COUNTY CONSOLIDATION.

Georgia's neighboring state of Tennessee, at the recent session of its legislature, provided the method by which it could reduce the number of its counties, admittedly a handicap today to the efficient and economic administration of public affairs and a heavy burden to the taxpayers.

Yet Georgia, which is a greater sufferer than Tennessee by this same evil, has taken no statewide steps towards remedying the evil and, whenever the subject is broached in political conversation, it is conceded that, politics being what they are in this state, hope for reform in this issue is futile, at least for many Brainard Cheney, describing the legal steps taken in Tennessee in an article in The Constitution of Sunday last, admits that consolidation of counties in that state remains in the future, but points out that enactment of five enabling laws by the legislature clears the way for this desirable end. It is thus evident that the movement has begun in Tennessee, which is more than can be said in Georgia.

True there are now two counties fewer in Georgia than there were not so many years ago. This, however, is the result of local action by which Fulton county absorbed Campbell and Milton counties and in only small sense was it Indicative of the general need of fewer counties for the state as a whole.

Tennessee has 95 counties. They average, in area. 442 square miles, while the population average, per county, is 27,543.

Georgia has 159 counties, with average area of 373 square miles and average population of

Thus, of the two states, Georgia's condition is by far the worse.

Multiplicity of counties involves more than one undesirable result. It causes duplication of expense and lack of co-ordination in the administration of local governmental functions. It levies a heavy burden upon the taxpayers, who must support a half-dozen staffs of county functionaries in place of one. Regardless of whether those officials receive their recompense in the form of fees or salaries, the cost of maintaining more than needed is unavoidably far greater than efficiency requires.

Originally, counties were formed of an approximate size which would permit any citizen to travel from his home to his county seat, and return, in one day. That was in the horse and buggy era. Today, with the advent of the automobile and paved roads, the same end could be secured were six or ten counties made into

Reduction in number of counties would make it possible, too, to reduce the personnel of the Georgia legislature. This should result in less politics within that body, less confusion and acrimony in debate and better results in legislation enacted. It is axiomatic that a smaller deliberative group is more cohesive, more effective in operation.

Georgia, faced with the same problem in more aggravated form, will watch with interest to see how the citizens of Tennessee accept the opportunity provided to reduce the number of their counties in the interest of efficiency and economy in government.

A GIFT FOR SERVICE.

The gift of a building to house the department of vocational agriculture and home economics at Young Harris College, in North Georgia, by Walter H. Rich, of Atlanta, typifies in forceful manner the finer use of money for the advantage of a state and its people.

Few educational institutions have achieved the results, or can boast so fine a roster of graduates, in comparison to resources and capacity, as can Young Harris. It is, in literal sense, a very real "light in the mountains," providing educational opportunity to hundreds of the finest of Georgia's youth who would. otherwise, in all probability never see the door of advancement through knowledge opened to

Yet, at Young Harris, they must give something more than book knowledge to their students. Something more, even, than the practical training in those activities of life in which they make their students adept. They give a spirit, a far-seeing view of the problems and the opportunities of today. They send out not merely trained young people, but citizens of great value in straight-thinking ability, in high moral sense and in capacity for leadership.

The building given by Mr. Rich has long been needed at the college. It will perpetuate his name, the name of a man whose primary interest in life is service, in the memories of students of the years to come, who will carry the things they learn in school into fine application in their later lives.

Young Harris College has served magnificently in the past. With the added ability provided by such gifts as this by Walter Rich, it will be able to serve still better in the years to come.

THE LAWYERS' LAW SCHOOL.

Having established a precedent last fall of returning to "school" to learn new rules of procedure in the United States district courts, the lawyers will once again enter the classroom. this time to learn the latest steps in the everbroadening sphere of labor jurisprudence. Under the joint sponsorship of Emory University, the Atlanta Bar Association, the Georgia Bar Association and bar organizations of adjoining states, the class will be called to order in Atlanta on April 14 for a two-day session.

The necessity for a better understanding of labor practice may be understood when it is remembered revolutionary changes in the relation of employe to employer have taken place within the past few years. The wage-hour legislation, the Wagner Act and many other laws have brought about unforeseen complications and conflicts of interest which developed only as administrative experience brought them

Just as many a rule of law seemed complicated to the legal neophyte, but, with practice, gradually became altogether simplified, so it is hoped it will be in the field of labor practice. The transition in labor relations occurred with such rapidity few, if any, comprehensive courses embracing the changes, if they were actually known and understood, have become available at law schools. The practicing lawyer, old and young, has been left more or less to his own resources to interpret laws the meaning of which now seem to be in doubt, even to the men who wrote them.

The 1,500 lawyers who are expected to attend the classes should benefit perceptibly from the discussions. But, as most judges and lawyers know, laws can be made to seem perfectly clear in the individual mind. It is not until the facts are applied that the complications set in. This will be particularly true in the field to be explored. Nevertheless, the attempt to simplify through the medium of an open and frank discussion is deserving of commendation.

ON CHILD RAISING

The mental labyrinth through which modern mothers wander in their search for methods of raising modern children has often been ascribed by phychologists to the changed world in which they live, to the unrest of the times and the growth of a school of thought which attempts to apply psychological principles to immature minds rather than the hairbrush to the appropriate spot.

Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy, wife of the ambassador to the Court of St. James, has found quite a different explanation for the rise of the socalled scientific methods. In an article by Jerome Beatty reprinted in Reader's Digest, she explains she is afraid she hasn't brought up the nine little Kennedys scientifically. When faced with problems of child behavior, she bought books on the rearing of children and studied the latest advice of the child psychologists.

Then, and here appears the crux of the matter, Beatty asked: "Did such advice help?"

"There was a note of defeat in her laugh," he reports. "... it helped me . . . I was consoled to learn that my children were no different from others. But pyschology didn't seem to work nearly as well as the things I learned instinctively from my mother when she was handling the six of us."

The fault with the younger generation, then, would seem to lie in the fact that families over several generations have dwindled, and lack of experience on the part of modern mothers may be ascribed to lack of experience on the part of their mothers, together with the decline and fall of the hairbrush as an institution of learn-

THE CAPITAL PARADE

BY JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

HENDERSON TO BE REWARDED WASHINGTON, April 3. New Deal economist, is a loquacious fellow, rather bold and never daunted. Some time ago, during a period when administration policy was not clear, he said to the President: "I'd like to know which way we are going. I have been singing by ear, and I may be off key." The President laughed, and answered: "Leon, you be off key." The President laughed, and answered: "Leon, you are always a good singer."

Henderson always follows the New Deal party line. And now he is to be rewarded handsomely. At this writing, the President has not appointed a successor to SEC Chairman William O. Douglas, but White House intimates book him as a 7-to-3 favorite. Even if the President changes his mind, he will be given more authority in the monopoly investigation, of which he is executive secretary. His promotion, of course, is not only a reward for his loyalty, but a victory for the New Dealers who sponsored him.

HIS POSITION Henderson's place in the New Deal group is a HIS POSITION Henderson's place in the New Deal group is a bit different than generally supposed. He is liked and admired by the President, but he is not a White House intimate like Harry Hopkins or Tom Corcoran. He visits the President infrequently. The New Deal leaders (Hopkins, Corcoran, Cohen, Bob Jackson and the others) have great respect for him and, while he sees them quite often, he is not in the top flight of the inner circle. He once described his position as follows: "I see much less of the President and the boys than people think. They don't have to check in with me. They know how I feel."

Perhaps Henderson's place can be explained best by an illus-

Perhaps Henderson's place can be explained best by an illustration of the sort of work he has done, generally behind the scenes. In the summer of '37, the President was disturbed by signs of the new business depression. Charles Merriam, of the National Resources Board, was asked to prepare a study analyzing future prospects and suggesting a program. He immediately recruited Henderson, and they spent several months interviewing high government officials and economists. Henderson then wrote an elaborate and very pessimistic memorandum, entitled "The Emergency Prob-lems in the Industrial-Government Field." It forecast the need for extra relief, urged an attack on monopolies, and gave a preview of what later became the administration's program.

Such jobs often passed unnoticed and, in the main, Henderson's reputation rests on his forecasts of business trends. During the NRA period, he prophesied that good times were to be expected. He was ridiculed by more conservative economists, because, being a very unorthodox technician, he cited such evidence as the increasing marriage rate, and the decreasing number of families doubling up in single houses and apartments. His second forecast was spectacular. During the winter of 1936-'37, he called the turn of the second depression at a time when few economists would take the

HIS BACKGROUND Henderson has an unusual confidence in his own ability and, if he is named to the SEC, he will have no qualms on taking one of the most important government jobs. He has little detailed knowledge of the securities laws or of the holding company act that the SEC administers. But he has had administrative experience as a captain in the ord-nance department during the war, as a Pennsylvania state official a member of the NRA board. He thoroughly believes in round-table discussions between government and business and, though his selection will disquiet Wall Street, the brokers and bankers will get a chance to be heard. A graduate of Swarthmore College, Henderson has been a practicing economist most of his life. He taught at the University of Pennsylvania and the Carnegie Institute of Technology, and for nine worked for the Russell Sage Foundation. After his period at the NRA, he served as economist to the Democratic national committee and to Harry Hopkins at the WPA. Coupled with other recent appointments, Henderson's promotion shows clearly that the President is as determined as ever not to trim his sails. As has been said, Henderson is a 100 per center in the New Deal. He is also one of the most vigorous proponents of the outstanding advisers to the White House. Therefore, his background and opinions are important.

Remarkable WASHINGTON, Performance In a valuable article in the New York Times magazine, Mr. Otto Tolischus, from Berlin, summarizes the economic news that has been coming piecemeal out of Germany.

It shows how a country poor in raw resources, almost bankrupt financially, can, within a few years, by ruthlessly dragooning all human labor, liberty and property, put all its people to work to a point of acute labor shortage, vastly increase both its military and put all its people to work to a point of acute labor shortage, vast-ly increase both its military and industrial production, create a gi-gantic army, air force and defen-sive system of fortifications and make a good start in building a navy. There is no question that that is one of the most remarkable performances in human industry. We learned something about how to do it in the World War in our mobilization of man-power our mobilization of man-power and industry. We did it by indirect rather than direct methods and kept the iron hand covered by a velvet glove, but the iron hand was there. It has to be, to run a nation on this formula. It produced actorishing and uneverted reastonishing and unexpected re-sults. Nobody had ever dreamed that this or any other country could arm and equip more than 6,000,000 men in all services in a little over a year and, at the same time, not destructively interfere with the cilivian uses of its indus-trial system. We did it but we did not scratch the surface in com-parison with this German per-

It rests on the right in government to fix both wages and prices—and to keep both at little more than subsistence levels. It needs un-unquestioned authority to say how long men shall work, just whom they shall work for and to punish all those who do not work hard and well. It simply cannot admit any differences of opinion or any failure of instant obedience to the

of course, this is nothing more than slavery—"enforced labor for private masters, not in punishment for crime." Theoretically, but not practically, we could do it too. We could do it far better than Germany has done it because we have more resources and facilities of every kind. We could completely abolish unemployment. It is pos-sible that, by a rigid control of wages and prices at low levels and confiscation of property and profits, we could produce at costs so low that we could undersell the world, absorb its markets—and even produce so much so cheaply that everybody would enjoy abun-

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL

WHY NOT PROFESSORS? Two of the most engaging gentlemen to visit in Atlanta in recent years have been college professors. One of them was T. V. Smith, of the University of Chicago, where he teaches philosophy. He spoke here about three months ago. The other was Dr. Bruce Campbell Hopper, of Harvard University, who last night talked to Harvard alumni.

Dr. Smith entered politics in Chicago, representing in the Illinois state legislature a district which once had been a silk stocking and which now is only part silk stocking, the remainder being cotton stocking or, indeed, no stockings at all. He went from that to the congress of the United States, the same district giving him a

Dr. Hopper has kept out of politics but his field is government, especially international government. He rather mournfully wishes that some of the state politicians would enter the universities and teach classes in state and local government and thus revise or create an interest in specific local problems on the part of the students.

Now, it so happens I do not share the scorn of those who laughed the professor in squarement; nor does the physics.

at the professors in government; nor does the phrase, It seems to me the professor from Harvard may have hit upon the solution in this very casual remark. Perhaps this would be a better world if the politicians went now and then into the teaching profession and the professors took over some of the functions of

NOT A BAD JOB It seems rather obvious that the professors who were enlisted in the cause of government, did a rather good job. There were exceptions. There always are. But, it ought to be remembered that many of the professors quit when politicians began to interfere and break up the outline of government as drawn by one of the professors.

It was the professional politicians, for whom I hold a very definite brief as being a very necessary individual, who got the country into the muddle in which it found itself. Certainly the professional politician had not been able to create a government which was flexible enough to meet the economic changes.

The advisers of Mr. Herbert Hoover, and in fact Mr. Hoover himself, were very confident in 1929 that prosperity was just around the corner. It will be recalled that some six months after the crash of October, 1929, that Mr. Hoover told a worried committee that they had called three months too late; that prosperity was a matter of weeks.

matter of weeks. No set of professors, called to the flag by the New Deal, ever made a botch as bad as that. In fact, the professors did a rather good job. It was after the professors were all but eliminated from the scene that the New Deal began to run into real trouble.

The very theories advanced by the professors were seized upon by the professional politician and exploited and abused for the pur-pose of getting votes. The WPA abuses, the many ridiculous proj-ects all may be laid at the feet of a politician and not at the feet of the professors.

THE BEST ADVICE Mr. T. V. Smith would be able, I am sure to give better advice to the inquiring voter, than would any politician who might appear on the stump.

Indeed, it is the politician who assured the people that money ought to be taken from the business and given to those who haven't it, who has created a condition whereby about half the people pay no taxes at all. They are the ones who heed his clamor and elect him. And they are the ones who keep wanting more and more "benefits" without themselves contributing even honest sweat to the cause of government. If some tax system is devised where everyone pays according to his ability and business is not over-taxed, then there will be less of this clamor. It now is obvious that if we are to have free school books, pensions, job insurance, schools with eight-month or nine-month terms, public health with free medical treatment, and all the other benefits of a socialized state, they must be paid for and that business can't do it all by its longescene.

I, for instance, would rather take Professor Smith's advice than any of our political figures. And on the international problems I would prefer Mr. Hopper's advice. I think he knows more about international relations and trade than any of our Georgia statesmen.

Yet, I agree with Professor and Congressman Smith that the politician is necessary to our form of government. He is not a necessary evil. The professional politician makes possible the gov-

Professor Smith thinks we ought not to abolish the politician but ought to improve the breed. The Kentucky Derby and the Preakness are two great horse races held, so they say, for the purpose of improving the breed of horses. If some professor will give us the formula for improving the breed of politician we may get somewhere with where with it. Meanwhile, I am for more professors in government. Especially more of the type of Smith, of Chicago, and Hopper, of Harvard.

The workers are poor and deserving women, mentally and physically capable of caring for a household. They are trained for two weeks in the arts of making occupied beds, cooking simple meals, giving first aid and cleaning everything from floors to bables.

The homes to which they are sent—neatly tricked out in special uniforms—are overwhelmed by misfortune. The wife and mother is sick abed. The man of the house, too poor to employ a servant, goes to his WPA job, or one like it, and leaves the children unashed and unfed and household dirt undisturbed The Aid's job is not to be a nurse, but to do everything that a wife and mother should do. She cleans, scrubs, sterilizes. She washes and feeds the kids and gets them off to school. She cooks and waits on the sick person. For this service she receives the same wage paid in WPA sewing rooms. It is a worth-while service, for it prevents the spread of disease and gives thousands of distressed homes new self-respect and new hope. One beneficiary, awed by so much good fortune, said to the Aid: "I pinch myself at night to make sure I'm not dreaming. It doesn't seem possible that anything so wonderful should happen

A communication from Walt Bogart, of Stevenson, old friend of Stewart, reveals that he starred in three sports-football, basketball and baseball.

"Unknown to many, Stewart once was a crack catcher. He is just another one of those switch play-ers. I have seen Mack turn in creditable performances around second base," Bogart points out.

"Better prep halfbacks than Stewart were unheard of during his grid career. His snake hips made many would-be tacklers dizzy. And Mack has, or had, a dead eye for the hoop. He was top scorer in the north Alabama cage loop.

Bogart goes on so say that "Mack is perhaps the most out standing athlete ever to be graduated from Stevenson High. It all seems very interesting because I have heard so many people say, "He just doesn't look like an

The St. Paul Saints, Association pennant winners, finally got an unearned run off Stewart in the fourth inning of yesterday's game. And even then they were aided by what looked like a strictly spring umpire's decision. Anton, who used to play for New Orleans, got to second when Peters threw wide at first. Stewart seemed to have him on a quick pick-off to Anderson, but the second-base umpire didn't agree. And so Anton scored on a hit. That was the only run against Stewart, who retired

HARD TO FORGET.

It was difficult, watching the Crackers and St. Paul perform, to forget the picture of Ralph Guldahl on the final nine holes in the Masters tournament at Augusta.

Where others were prone to play shots safe, he went for the pin—and made it. It didn't seem possible, as the final round continued, that a human could be so immune to strain and also have the control over any game that Guldahl had.

Many, including fellow pros, professed not to have any great love for Guldahl. And maybe you can't blame them. It must be distressing to realize there's a robot in the field when the big money pots are at stake.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, April 3.—The world sugar contract moved irregularly today to close ½ point higher to ½ lower. Switching operations broadened when near-by May extended its premium over early 1940 deliveries another full point. Sales totaled 7,900 tons with May closed 1.19, December 1.15½.

The domestic contract moved slowly as light trade selling found interest small. Closing prices were 2 to 3 points down on sales of 2,200 tons.

No. 3 range follows:

BOND LIST ENJOYS FURTHER REBOUND

for Top-Grade Demand Loans Gives Market Impressive Number of Gains

Daily Bond Averages.

NEW YORK, April 3.—(A)-Bonds enjoyed a further reboun today from the low levels estab-lished last week under selling lished last week under selling waves inspired by the latest central European crisis.

It was not a uniform recovery but in general a duplicate of Saturday's uneven upturn. There were some soggy spots in the rail division, which explained a fairly sharp drop in the Associated Press carrier average in spite of numerous gains in the group as a whole.

Most low yield corporate liens were able to count on good supporting bids and the same was true of United States governments, although two or three treasuries dipped from 5-32ds to 9-32ds of the point. The improved sector had gains running to 17-32ds.

The sustained demand for tor grade issues combined with traders' bidding in the speculative issues in anticipation of a further rally gave the list an impressive number of closing gains. Foreign loans were inclied to follow. Transactions totaled $6,265,000 face value against $10,276,850 last Friday.

Principal Buying at Chicago Is Credited to Mills and Exporters.

CHICAGO GRAINS AND PROVISIONS 6.25 6.42 6.60 6.62

CHICAGO, April 3.—(P)— Wheat prices slumped a cent today before buying orders at around 67 cents a bushel for May and July contracts started a recovery that wiped away about half of the loss. European political developments were thrust into the background, with other commodity and security markets apparently over the war scare, and bearish trade factors such as increased world shipments and improved domestic crop pros-2 cents in quotations at Liverpool, registering that market's reaction to week-end developments, touched off liquidation and some short selling here. After these orders had been executed, however, the market ran into some resting support and buy-ing credited to exporters and mills. Brokers expressed belief some of the buying originated with dealers who were lifting hedges on wheat or flour disposed of through the government export subsidy

NEW ORLEANS, April 3.—(A)

The average price of middling cotton at 10 southern spot markets today was 6 points higher at 8.51 cents a pound. The average price for the past 30 market days was 8.62 cents.

NEW YORK, April 3 .- (AP)-Cotton futures quickly responded today to breaking of the Washington stalemate on cotton legislation with senate passage of the Bank-head act. A last-hour buying flurry left final prices 6 to 7 points ahead. Contracts were supplied largely by Bombay dealers in the late dealings while earlier pressure was also credited to foreign interests. A generally bullish interpretawas based on two siderations. The bill would be an effective check to an export subsidy measure, and farmers would have to cut new production to the act.

(The Bankhead proposals calls for sale of the Commodity Credit Corporation of 3,000,000 bales of government loan stocks at 5 cents a pound to farmers who agree to reduce production below allotments by a corresponding figure.)

Metropolitan reports to its policyholders-

HIGHLIGHTS OF 1938

ance Company is a mutual company. It is operated solely for the benefit of its 29 million policyholders, whose life insurance with this Company totaled over $22,612,000,000 at the end of the past year.

In 1938, more than $566,300,000 was paid to policyholders and beneficiaries, and $176,000,000 was added to statutory reserves for payment of obligations which will accrue in future years under present policies. Dividends paid in 1938 amounted to $103,940,000. A still larger sum-$118,042,000-has been set aside for dividend payments in 1939.

Metropolitan has paid, since 1927, more than $5,000,000,000 to policyholders and beneficiaries.

More than $1,800,000,000 of life insurance protection was provided by the 3,330,151 new policies issued during the past year,

Assets held for the benefit of policyholders and beneficiaries-which include more than 100,000 carefully selected, diversified investments-amount to more than $4,900,000,000.

As part of its welfare program in 1938, Metropolitan distributed 68 million health booklets-an average of 1 every half-second-and published monthly health-education advertisements in magazines whose combined circulation for the year was over 300 million copies.

Metropolitan welcomes every opportunity to provide its policyholders with information that will enable them to have a clearer understanding of how the Company operates. To help accomplish this, the Company is publishing a series of educational advertisements in magazines, and seeks in various other ways to keep its policyholders informed. A booklet, soon to be available, contains a detailed account of Metropolitan's progress in 1938. We shall be glad to send a copy on request.

Family Dinner at Candler Home To Mark 100th Birthday of Father

WHEN Mr. and Mrs. C. Howard Candler entertain members of the latter's family at dinner tomorrow evening at their home, Callenwolde, the occasion will mark the 100th anniversary of the birth of the late Wilbur Fisk Glenn. Mrs. Candler, you know, is the former Miss Flora Glenn, daughter of the late Mr. Glenn. Although a native of Jefferson, Ga., Mr. Glenn was one of Atlanta's pioneers and carved for himself an outstanding place in the annals of the city's religious, social, financial and cultural circles.

Mr. Glenn's memory is cherished deeply by his children, and it was their devotion to him that inspired the erection of the handsome Glenn Memorial church in his honor and memory. The church, located at the entrance to the Emory University campus, stands as a permanent tribute to the beloved Atlanta

RICH'S

You Could Lose Weight in a Hurry If You Gained It All At Once

My Day: Many Think Strength Faith in Youth Lies Only in Force By Eleanor Roosevelt.

SEATTLE, Wash.—Nothing could be happier than the progress of family affairs in Seattle. The older children have begun their Easter holiday, and would like to spend every minute of it at the hospital. It seems difficult to explain that even though "Mummy" may be in bed with no apparent business to attend to, it really would not be well for her to spend all of her days playing checkers or some other game with her children.

After much persuasion they were induced to follow their usual Saturday and Sunday activities, with a promise that "Mummy" and the baby would be seen in the late afternoon. Friday evening I offered to read aloud to Buz until beditime, but there is a program on the air called time, but there is a program on the air called "The Lone Ranger," which seems to be entirely satisfactory to the young. Seeing how eagerly these children listened to the radio, I wondered if something more constructive could not be done during the early evening programs for all ages of young people. What is on the air is sometimes helpful. It is rarely harmful, but it seems to me that there is an opportunity here for any amount of really constructive pleasure and profit which has not yet been fully grasped.

I am reading an enchanting book by Rachel Field called "All This, and Heaven, Too." In it, the description of the way "Mademoiselle" handled the children gives one so many imaginative leads that one feels one could go on endlessly devising radio games and programs which would be more fascinating to the youngsters, than programs which would be more fascinating to the youngsters, than much that I hear at present.

The papers yesterday carried one item of news which to me was very important. It was, of course, in the realm of foreign affairs, our State Department has recognized the new government in Spain, and officially stated that the civil war is over. To all of us there must come a great sense of relief, not just because armies have ceased to fight each other, but that men, women and children throughout Spain are at last free from the dread of attack by air, of bombs falling in their cities. Sometimes, even in the quiet countryside, they have suffered starvation, due not only to the impossibility of normal trade, but also to the interruption of normal life in Spain, which would produce food for the people, and the wherewithal to obtain other necessities through trade.

Though help will be needed for a year or more at least, those of us who have an interest in watching the real development of civilization are hoping to see this new government prove that it really believes what it has stated; namely, that it actually represents the desires of the people of Spain. If that is so, there would be no need for cruelty or oppression. Even the leaders of the opposition are no menace to a government when the people are loyal, and elemency will heal the rifts of war more quickly than cruelty.

In a message I read not long ago, it was stated that all but criminals would be safe under the new government. The question, of course, is who will be considered criminals. Too many dictatorships have proved to us that when one man or a small group of men decide on this particular point, a criminal is often a man who happens to think differently from the leader in power. Proof to the world that a government is stable and strong, lies in the ability of its leaders to show their lack of fear by their generosity to the opposition. Too many people today seem to think that strength lies only in cruelty and force. Temporarily this may be true, but it can never win out in the end.

Pays Good Dividends

By Caroline Chatfield

Dear Miss Chatfield: I'm writing about the case of a young friend whose mother stops her everywhere she turns. The girl is 17, loves a good time with clean fun but can't manage to have it. The mother is a European Catholic and doesn't want any Protestant friends in the picture because she thinks only of marriage where a boy is concerned and she's afraid Protestant girl friends may introduce her daughter to Protestant boys. When the daughter comes in her mother questions her as if she were a criminal and though the child always tells the full truth her mother doesn't be-lieve her and tries to trap her in falsehoods. Can you offer any suggestion that would make the girl's life more agreeable?
ONLOOKER.

Answer: Under such unrea-sonable restrictions it seems to me that the girl's best opporparish house. Surely the mother will feel comparatively safe in permitting her daughter to enjoy the pleasures of the parish e. No doubt there are which she can join, clubs that have a planned program of entertainment always under the chaperonage of the "cloth."

Anybody that knows anything about human nature can tell a mother that by browbeating a child with accusing questions refusing to accept the answers as truthful, she's inviting deception and inciting rebellion in the girl's heart; for young and old respond to faith that's placed in them by rising to meet expectations and accusations by slumping. Alas! bigoted, stubborn women are like sophomores; you can always tell 'em but you can never tell 'em

There's one star of hope in the sky the daughter of such til she's out from under; and if she can be patient, try to see her mother's prohibitions as misguided efforts to protect her, comply with the rules and regusweeter when it comes and there will be no bitter regrets.

to discover the rare one that may turn up for you, too, some day! Our illustration shows two stamps, part of a new series of five air-mail stamps issued by Nicaragua. They commemorate the Nicaraguan earthquake of eight years ago and honor Will Rogers, who flew to the scene of the disaster to aid the sufferers.

Each stamp bears the words, "Nicaragua pays homage to Will Rogers." Illustrated are the 1centavo stamp showing a Nica-raguan airport and an inset por-trait of Rogers, also the 2-cen-tavo stamp with a full-length fig-ure of Rogers beside his plane.

The other three stamps are the

Q. Please tell me how to rid my hair of excessive oil?

A. Brush it thoroughly, morning and night, and shampoo with tincture of green soap, U. S. P., once a week. Massage the scalp with the finger tips and rinse with lukewarm water until soap has been removed. Use the green soap until the excessive oily condition has been remedied, and then return to a mild pure soap. Massage and brushing is most important to bring about a healthy condition of the scalp.

Q. Give a formula for a deodorant powder.

A. Mix together 1 ounce of bicarbonate of soda, 1 ounce of boric acid, 1-4 ounce of zinc peroxide, and a few drops of perfume.

INSTALLMENT XIII.

Mr. Edgar's coldness depressed me exceedingly; and all the way from the Grange I puzzled my brains how to put more heart into what he said. I saw her looking through the lattice, and I nodded to her; but she drew back. I entered without knocking. There was never such a dreary, dismal scene as the formerly cheerful bouse presented! Hindley was not house presented to her; have not house presented to her; have not not calculate the moment to keep me out of the grave. That is how not relent a moment to keep me out of the grave. That is how out of the grave. That is not my Heathcliff. I shall he out of the grave. That is not my Heathcliff. I shall he out of the grave. That is how out of the was never such a dreary, dismal scene as the formerly cheerful house presented! Hindley was not there. Mr. Heathcliff sat at a footman? "My master bid me tell you that you must not expect either a letter or a visit from him at present." I said. "He sends his love, ma're and his wishes for your ma'am, and his wishes for your happiness."

Mrs. Heathcliff's lip quivered slightly, and she returned to her seat in the window. Her husband took his stand on the hearthstone, like she was, but her life is came soothingy on the ear.

Heathcliff said quietly: "Do you imagine I shall leave Catherine to his duty and humanity? Before you leave this house, I must exact a promise from you, that you'll get me an interview with her;

get me an interview with her; consent or refuse, I will see her! What do you say?"

"I say, Mr. Heathcliff," I replied, "you must not; you shall not, through my means."

"You suppose she has nearly forgotten me?" he asked. "No, Nelly! you know she has not! You know as well as I do that for every thought she spends on Linton, she spends a thousand on Linton, she spends a thousand on

"Catherine and Edgar are as fond of each other as any two people can be!" cried Isabella, with sudden vivacity.

"Your brother is wondrous fond of you, too, isn't he?" observed Heathcliff scornfully. "He turns you adrift on the world with surprising alacrity. Ellen, I can hardly regard her in the light of a rational creature, so obstinately has she persisted in forming a fabulous notion of my character and acting on the false impressions she cherished. But at last I think she begins to know me. It was a marvellous effort of perspicacity discover that I did not love her! If she desired to go, she might: the nuisance of her presence out-weighs the gratification to be de-rived from tormenting her."
"You are not so bewitched, ma'am, are you, as to remain with him of your own accord?"

"Take care, Ellen!" answered Isabella, her eyes sparkling irefully. "Don't put faith in a single word he speaks. He's a lying fiend! a moster—"
